A KERNEL OF GENIUS

It's not to be imagined Soviet Russia's experiments with streamlined government won't produce some good ideas along with the bad ones. The Russians are nobody's fools.

There's a kernel of political genius in their credo that making mistakes of judgment, is a crime against the state. While this approach to the problem of ineptitude in government may restrain initiative, it also furnishes a warning tug to hasty souls who act first and think afterward. For some reason or other, a lot of them are on public payrolls.

For instance, the failures and confusions of Russia's polar flights and weather observations now are getting official attention. Dr. Otto Schmidt, head of the projects, will be called on the carpet. Failure to explain his way out of trouble will go hard on the doctor, who may or may not have been at fault, but nevertheless is held strictly responsible for what happened under his direction.

Thinking about the United States, one can't help but wonder if maybe the Russians haven't hit on something pretty good.

A SIMPLE REMEDY

This country needs an elder statesman. Herbert Hoover comes close to filling the bill. Sufficiently grounded in politics to know what goes on and at the same time sufficiently detached to be able to look at it objectively, he is doing a good job of contemplation. That's the function of an elder statesman.

Mr. Hoover has been looking around Europe where his humanitarian service during and after the World war still qualifies him for respect. He has reached certain conclusions. One in particular is worth thinking about.

This country has two general objectives: to keep peace and to preserve popular government. Mr. Hoover advises they can be reached by keeping peace with the dictatorships as well as with popular governments. "The form of government which other peoples pass through is not our business," he says. Our business, in his opinion, is protecting the democracy which we cherish. It can be performed best by revitalizing it within our own borders, keeping it clean of infections, wiping out its corruptions, fighting its abuses, insisting on intellectual honesty, building up the morals of democracy—and staying out of war.

This is a simple remedy—nothing exciting or spectacular about it. Who has a better one to propose?

THANKS TO MARTIN MARDEN

A 16 year old messenger boy, Martin Marden of New York City, has written a prayer of thanksgiving for being in a land where everyone, regardless of race, may take part in national ceremonies; for being in a land governed by democracy, instead of force; for being in a land where the youth of all races have a tomorrow, rather than being in his native land where the youth of one race is without a tomorrow. The prayer came to the attention of the superintendent of New York schools, Harold G. Campbell, who is doing his best to give it thorough publicity.

Martin, his widowed mother and two other children fled to America from Germany two years ago. Come to think of it, Martin, we're all thankful here, whenever we stop to think about it—thankful because we can take for granted so many things which astonish a Jewish boy from Germany.

We can talk our heads off about what our politicians are doing without looking for pussypoosers who would tattle—and what if they did?

We can wear a brown shirt, a black shirt or a blue one as we please, and it doesn't mean a thing, except that we have a queer taste in shirts.

We can pop off to each other and occasionally swing our special punch when we get peeved, and

WATERWAY PLAN TO BOOST HITLER'S PROGRAM

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

NEW YORK, April 4.—When history finally appraises Adolf Hitler's regime it easily may record that he could have done few things contributing more to the might of Germany than bring to fruition the thousand-year-old German dream of a navigable waterway through the heart of Europe.

Hitler's dictatorship has provided such a rapid succession of epochal events that it is hard for the outside world to recognize another milestone in anything so prosaic as a waterway.

Connect Rhine and Danube. Still, there is vast importance in the announcement that work is to be rushed on the canal which will connect the Rhine and Danube rivers, thus providing a passage for ships a distance of some 2,500 miles, from the Baltic to the Black sea.

This will mark a seven league stride in Der Fuehrer's program for the creation of a great Germanic confederation. The significance of the river project is this:

It will open up an Arabian nights treasure house of commerce for Germany throughout the Balkans and near east.

It will enable her to undersell competing countries because of cheap transportation and easy access to markets.

It will give her the materials she needs to make her independent of other powers.

It will be of invaluable assistance to her in extending her economic then grin sheepishly about losing our tempers and go out together to have a beer or an ice cream soda.

We can laugh at just about anything we want to and not get into trouble, and most of us, when our digestion is working all right, still think that a sense of humor is a whole of a lot better tool for keeping things straightened out than a program, a concentration camp or a bullet just back of the ear.

The dickens of it is, we forget to set much store by these things, until we hear about people who don't have them any more, and then we just can't understand why they stand for it.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, April 5

According to the lunar transits, this should be a very lively day, with the energies fairly well stimulated for putting over important propositions. Employers and those in places of authority should be inclined to lend substantial support or encouragement. But be alert to plots, schemes, intrigues and false reports, both in business and private associations. Some surprising change or journey may prove advantageous.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be ready for some surprising development which will stimulate their affairs and possibly be of great encouragement in new undertakings. They should be able to obtain the solid support and co-operation either of employers or those in places of influence and financial stability. But be wary as to underhand factors, plots, intrigues or peculiar angles, as deceit and misrepresentations may menace both business and personal associations.

A child born on this day may be enterprising, constructive and ambitious, and have much originality and ingenuity. This may insure a life of romance and adventure as well as practical achievement.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland, New York City.

HABIT TRAINING

BED WETTING is a bad habit, usually traced to negligence in the training of the young child. This is not always the case, and that is why a careful physical examination is important.

Dr. Copeland

The child may be a victim of some disease of the urinary organs. This may lead to persistent bed wetting in spite of all efforts made to correct the habit. Local irritation in the genital region, rectal irritation and worms are other factors that must be considered among the possible causes. But if these conditions have been ruled out, it is safe to assume that the child is suffering from poor habit training.

When no physical defects are present, training should be begun at as early an age as possible. This will undoubtedly overcome the bad habit.

"Enuresis" is the word used by doctors to describe the trouble. It may occur either in the day or at night. Some children suffer from it both day and night, but usually at night only. Boys and girls are equally afflicted.

Parents at Fault

A well-known baby specialist stated years ago that when a child suffers this way after he is two and a half years old, the fault lies at the door of the parents. This will be the case if the parents fail to realize the importance of habit training at an early age.

Too often it is believed that the child's difficulty is due to inheritance. The parents expect the child to outgrow the habit just as they did. But to trust to this notion is unwise.

A child should be taught the importance of going to the bathroom at definite intervals. The bladder must be completely emptied before retiring at night. I cannot overstate the advantages of awakening the child at periodic intervals during the night, so that the bladder may be emptied.

As a rule it is best to awaken the child every few hours. This period may be lengthened, perhaps to twice a night, possibly at 10 p. m. and at 6 a. m., as soon as a good habit has been acquired. All stimulating and exciting play prior to bed time must be avoided. Restrict the fluids after 4 p. m. Make sure that the evening meal is a simple one without spices and irritating foods.

CHAPTER XVIII

Clarice saw an opportunity to serve herself via the approbation of Jaxie. "Of course, at the first opportunity, I suppose you are writing your column as you travel? I read your clever little farewell to Chicago just before I left," Marie confessed.

"Well, I didn't," Marie confessed. "The last week before my wedding was one grand rush. Harry didn't like it a little bit, but I suppose you will put us in your column." Her tone was between statement and indignation.

Jaxie laughed. "I have, already. In the copy I shall mail from La Junta this evening. Want to read it?"

"Oh! Marie squealed, 'do I?' And how! I suppose you will get in some excitement about looking for that bond thief. Do you suppose he could be on this train? Harry says that every passenger is under suspicion—except him."

"Even he?" Jaxie contradicted merrily.

"General suspicion lets no one out."

"Why, you wouldn't think—?" Marie began.

"Mr. Gaines says the most likely one is that little old man with the cane bags," Clarice offered. "He would be taking the bonds to the east that way for the real crook."

Jaxie slipped into the cool chignon frock with puffed cap sleeves and a slightly low-cut front. It was very simple and informal, but her little slenderness sheathed in the soft clinging folds made her look like a dried beside Marie's buxom plumpness, which was not enhanced by her over-adornment. She wore brilliant around her short neck and her plump arms, and long pendants dangled from her ears, beneath short and severely married hair.

Jaxie's gleaming bronze hair was swept low at one side of her head in a wide swirl, with the merest suggestion of a wave that exposed one ear lobe. Into that one she screwed a single flat pearl and wore no other jewels.

Margie regarded her with admiration. "Gee, but you do look stunning in that plain dress, all right. But that wouldn't be my style. I have to wear dressy things," she concluded with renewed confidence. Her trousseau was perfect; there could be no doubt of that in her mind. "Well, I'm all ready, so I guess I'd better run along. Harry will be cross if I keep him waiting too long."

The other girl exchanged glances of approval when she had gone. Jaxie laughed and held up her hands in mock horror. "She certainly is spoiling him early. Just imagine being a life time of anticipating a dodging Harry's displeasure. Poor thing!"

"None of that for me!" Clarice retorted.

"I suppose it could be worse," Jaxie continued thoughtfully, collecting her various toilet articles and fitting them into her compact dressing case. "Most women serve men one way or another. A business woman may think she is independent, but she usually is bowing to the dictates of some man either in a personal or impersonal capacity. I suppose you and I depend upon and serve the whims of men as anxiously as Mrs. Bortin does, whether or not we like to admit it."

"That may be," Clarice admitted, "but we do have the advantage of changing our bosses if they get too unreasonable."

"And providing our own ties and affections have not become too involved to be broken."

"Ties and affections have nothing to do with my career," scoffed Clarice. "All for me, and me for my own."

"Stronger women than we have made that same boast, my dear. I wonder if any woman knows what her emotions will do for her." She spoke as if to herself and half imagined that a pair of very blue eyes smiled at her from her reflection in the wall mirror.

Those same eyes glowed with frank admiration when Jaxie returned to her section, where Kirby awaited her. He had shaved, changed his linen and wore light summer tweeds.

"You grow more beautiful every time I look at you," he declared frankly.

"Another hundred years of looking at me and I might begin to deteriorate," she jested.

"I'd take a chance," he retorted. "But right now I am ready to look at you across a table with food on it. Queer how hungry a fellow can get—doing nothing."

As they passed through the long train to the dining car her sweet fragrance enveloped him pleasantly, and when he opened the doors for her her nearness so troubled him that he could scarcely resist the temptation to crush her in his arms.

To curb his madness he made inane remarks about anything which came to his mind: "was there ever a train on which the diner were not the farthest point from every other point? That would make a good geometry proposition."

"It is probably good business—enable everyone to exercise before and after meals."

"Staggering through a train a mile long must be equivalent to three miles straight ahead."

"That much, anyway," she agreed, as foolishly giddy as he.

The cars reeked of odors: soot, smoke, clothing, cosmetics. But Jaxie walked serenely in her exquisite loveliness, and oblivious of everything and everyone except Kirby and an occasional fleeting encounter with his hand or the woolly roughness of his coat against her bare arm, as they passed through the heavy doors and narrow corridors.

When they were seated at one of the small tables Jaxie observed that Clarice and her director friend already were served at the next table. She smiled at Clarice and noted Gaines' keen glance in her direction. She indicated them to Kirby and informed him in a low voice, "We are dining in the presence of the great and near-great."

"Oh, yeah?" he wanted to know. "Who?"

"The beautiful blonde is a movie star of tomorrow and her companion is none other than the great director of today, Mervin Gaines. The girl has promised to introduce him to me, which will make me one jump ahead of my program when I reach Hollywood."

Kirby shot her a keen glance and looked again toward the subjects of the discussion. "I shouldn't anticipate too much from him. He looks like a hard guy to deal with, and not too friendly."

"You're only jealous," she feigned scorn. "Oh, I know that I shouldn't have a chance with him, ordinarily, but being a city columnist gives me prestige with the movie industry. The higher they are, the easier they fall. Publicity high, wide and handsome—is what they all need. The biggest of them need the most, to help them stay big in the public's shifting eye. In so tragically short a time that eye can be focused upon someone else more glorified by the press."

"Well, if newspaper attention is all he craves from you—okay. But he might detect another star in the embryo stage if he gets friendly with you."

"I'm not prepared to wire my resignation to the office on the chance of anything so thrilling as that developing." Jaxie dismissed his inverted compliment with a smile. "The little blonde isn't so ingenious as she looks, by the way. I think she has been preparing herself for this break for a long time."

"She looks as hard as nails," Kirby observed, but his eyes were watching the man.

"Oh, you're prejudiced because she is blonde, and ambitious. I thought gentlemen preferred blondes."

"Only some gentlemen. Give me anything but a blonde. I prefer," his eyes lighted roughly as they inspected Jaxie's features, one by one, "brown hair that gleams in the light like burnished bronze, eyes that are deep and brown and mysterious, lips that are scarlet without rouge and smile without effort."

Jaxie held up her hand in warning. "I've seen that picture in the mirror for twenty-some years, so you need not describe it in detail."

"But you don't mind if I look at the picture as much as I wish?"

"You are welcome, if it affords you any pleasure," she laughed.

The Big Chief reached La Junta station a few minutes before nine o'clock. There, at four thousand feet above sea level, the soft winds were so full of ozone and oxygen that their freshness threatened to intoxicate the released passengers so long confined in the close air of the train. There was only a brief stop, but Jaxie felt as if she had filled her lungs with enough stimulant to last all the night. She and Kirby had just finished their prolonged dinner when the train stopped, and they descended to the platform to walk back to their car in the fresh air.

MEL KOONTZ—FAMOUS HOLLYWOOD ANIMAL TAMER—WRESTLES WITH A FULL-GROWN LION!

HERE'S MEL KOONTZ alone in the cage with four hundred and fifty pounds of lion. The huge lion crouches—then springs straight at Koontz. Nerves cool as ice, Mel meets the charge head on. Man and lion clinch. On-lookers feel their nerves grow tense. But Mel is master of the beast. No doubt about his nerves being healthy!

And, as Mel points out, one big difference in Camels has to do with healthy nerves. Mel says: "No matter how many I smoke, Camels don't frazzle my nerves."

Appearance Of Car Deemed Important Factor In Trade-In Negotiations

BOOSTS VALUE OF AGING AUTO

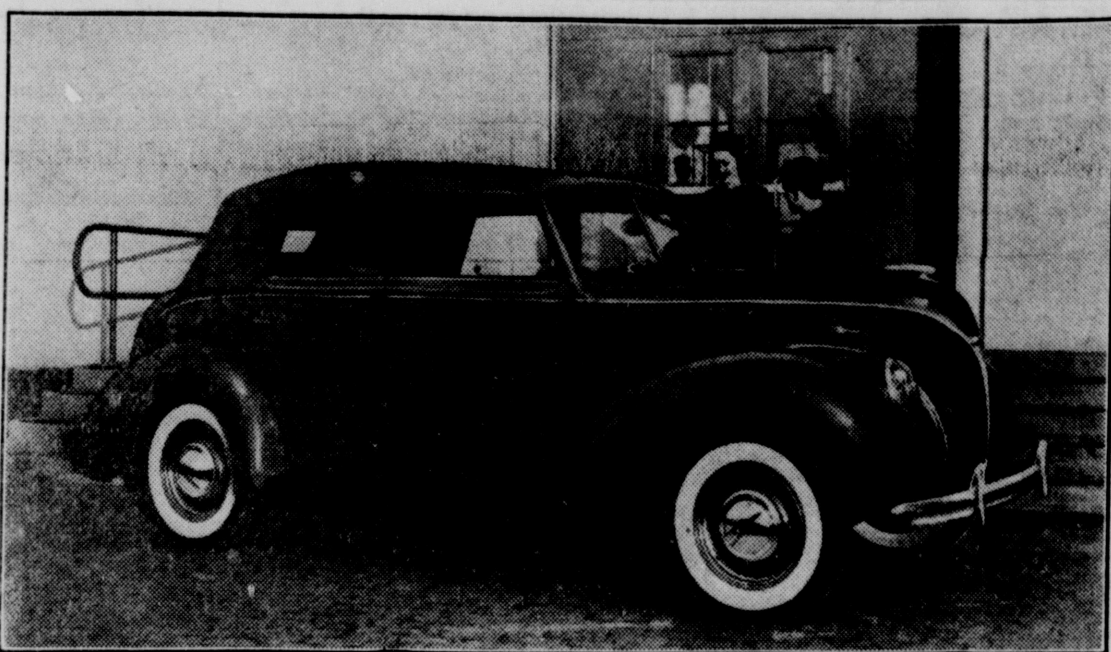

Even If You Aren't Buying New Car, You'll Want Your Present One To Look Good

If you aren't buying a new car this spring, you will want the present one to look new. E. L. Grate says. And even though you are buying a new car, the extra trade-in value will be many times the cost of a Kerrick Kleaner and polishing job. The early spring has meant early business for the Grate Motor company.

Grate offers a free pickup and delivery service to owners having their cars cleaned. His men will call for the car during the day-time hours when it is not being used and return it later in the day. Now is a good time to have the car given a spring house cleaning, Grate suggests. His services provide a vacuum cleaning of the inside of the car, taking out floor mat, and cushions so that the job will be done thoroughly.

Grate also offers a complete lubrication service at his garage and suggests that front wheels, transmission and differential be thoroughly checked before you start that extra driving which spring means.

1938 Ford V-8 Convertible Sedan

DECIDEDLY continental in styling, the 1938 Ford V-8 convertible sedan is a touring type combining the advantages both of an open and closed car. The tailored top can be folded flat and covered with a neatly fitting boot. Safety glass windows in chrome plated frames also can be lowered inside the doors, and door pillars removed and stowed. Seat cushions and backs are trimmed either in tan genuine leather or bedford cord. A foot rest and robe rail are provided in the rear compartment. The car has a large built-in compartment for luggage. Like all deluxe body types it is powered with the 85 horsepower V-8 engine.

CHECK TROUBLE AT THE SOURCE

Smith Garage Service Men Schooled In Use of New Automobile Motor Analyzer

Thorough check-up with the new motor analyzer recently installed in the service department of Smith Garage, local Chrysler and Plymouth dealer, helps owners to keep their cars in top running condition, and detects the need of minor adjustments, according to W. L. Yengling, service manager of the concern.

"Many factors which lessen the efficiency and safety originally built into the car are quickly uncovered by this new analyzer," Yengling continued. "All of our mechanics and service men have been trained in using this precise trouble-shooter, and can tell accurately the condition of a motor after a few minutes testing."

"Owners who want the best their cars have to offer for pleasant summer driving are invited to make use of the testing facilities of our analyzer. Motor analysis is one of the extra services which we offer because it means greater motoring pleasure, economy and safety."

5-MINUTE ICE CREAM FROM FRUIT AND CREAM

Next to serving just plain fruit and cream, what could be simpler than frozen fruit cream, which is nothing more than a mixture of left-over canned fruits and coffee cream, frozen in 5 to 10 minutes in the modern ice cream freezer? It seems almost unbelievable that such a smooth, fluffy frozen dessert could be so easily and inexpensively made. But here's how:

FROZEN FRUIT CREAM

Serves 4-6
2 cups canned fruit with juice (raspberries, apricots, or peaches)
1/4 cup sugar (approximately)
1 cup coffee cream

Mash fruits and stir in sugar. Combine with cream and pour in freezing container of modern ice cream freezer, filling it not more than two-thirds full; assemble and cover. Surround with mixture of three parts crushed ice and one part rock salt. Turn crank slowly but steadily until turning becomes difficult, about 5 to 10 minutes. Carefully remove cover, lift out dasher and pack down ice cream with a spoon. Replace cover, draw off water and replenish salt and ice mixture. Cover and allow to harden at least one hour before serving. You can get crushed ice all ready to use from The Citizen's Ice and Coal Company or you can chip off the desired amount from the block of ice in your ice refrigerator.

Quality Work Is Object Of Cleaners Association

There is no such thing as a secret method in dry cleaning, but there are many trade names, simply catch words, used to convey the idea to the reader that this or that cleaner has some exclusive method that is superior.

The Dry Cleaners' association maintains a completely equipped laboratory where constant experiments are carried out to meet the demands of its members, mostly because of the many new fabric combinations and to check the solvents (cleaning solutions) of their members.

The Paris, on the Benton road, is the only local plant devoted exclusively to dry cleaning which is a member of the Certified Cleaners. To be a member of this advanced organization not only must the equipment be modern but craftsmanship must also be the best.

To say that clothes cleaned by any particular company will wear longer is a tricky statement. Clothes that are absolutely clean certainly will wear longer, but any responsible cleaner does that.

Certainly, any Certified Cleaner member does. Often, to be certain all foreign matter is removed, the garments are cleaned several times. The trade speaks of this as "re-running." That's why no Certified dry cleaning plant encourages those hurry-up orders. Quality work can not be done by such methods.

SALEM TEAM CAPTURES LITTLE CITY CAGE TITLE

Shasteen Service Station Cagers Defeat Parma Five To Win Basketball Event

Salem Entry Takes Little City Cage Title For Second Time In Tournament's Four-Year History; Kent Collegians Win Consolation

The championship of Joe Kelley's fourth annual Little City basketball tournament for teams from cities of 10,000 population or less returned to Salem Saturday night as Shasteen's Sinclair Service Station cagers topped Parma Heights, 49 to 36, to capture the title.

It was the second time in the tournament's four-year history that a Salem team has won the championship. Sheen's Service copped the title in 1936. Hubbard's Cricquet Club was the winner in 1937.

Showing the same scoring strength and smooth floor work which carried them through four games to the finals, Shasteen's cagers had little trouble in conquering Parma Heights after getting accustomed to the visitors' style of play.

The Shasteen quint played on even terms with Parma in the first and second quarters, then stepped out in the third and fourth periods to win the championship going away.

Parma, led by Bill Davidson, former Baldwin-Wallace star, who was named the most valuable player in the tourney, was out in front 12 to 6 at the end of the first quarter. Shasteen's rallied in the second period to tie the score at 21-21.

Hitting their stride in the third period, the Shasteen cagers scored 16 points to Parma's nine to pull out in front, 37 to 30. The local team defended its lead in the fourth period by tallying 13 points to Parma's six.

Bob Jeffries paced Shasteen's in scoring in the final tilt with 19 points. The splendid floor work of Charlie McCloskey, Frankie Culler, Ed Wilms and Delmar Schaffer also played an important part in helping the Shasteen team to cop the title.

Shasteen's advanced to the finals with consecutive victories over Bedford, Hubbard, New Brighton, Pa. and Kent. Frank "Doc" Kelker, star of Western Reserve's football and basketball machines, played with the champions in the New Brighton and Kent games, but was unable to remain for the final contest. Herb Brown, Salem High basketball coach, remained out of the lineup Saturday because of a cold.

Parma, which was given a bye through the first round, reached the finals by defeating the Salem Knights of Columbus in the second round. Green Gables of North Georgetown in the quarter-finals, and Toronto's Aces in the semi-finals.

Tom Kinkade, the all-Ohio shoelace star, who won the tourney's individual scoring honors with 84 points in five games, and his Toronto Aces lost out in the consolation game to Kent's Collegians, 44 to 28.

Kinkade, who scored 41 points against a Newell, W. Va. team Friday night, failed to duplicate his feat in any of Toronto's Saturday games. He appeared tired in the semi-final and consolation contests and played listlessly in both games.

Mike Stasko, captain of Geneva college cage team last season, was the big gun for Toronto in the Saturday contests.

Shasteen's was the only Salem team to reach the semi-finals of the tourney. The other Salem entries fell by the wayside in the quarter-finals and second round.

Hainan's Restaurant dropped a close decision in the quarter-finals, losing to Kent's Collegians, 30 to 29. The Saxons, playing under the name of North Georgetown Green Gables, also lost out in the quarter-finals, falling before Parma Heights, 46 to 31.

The local Knights of Columbus team was eliminated in the second round by Parma, 43 to 24. The K. of C. quint defeated Brookfield in its first round game.

Three of Shasteen's players—McCloskey, Jeffries and Kelker—were honored by being named in the list of the 10 outstanding players in the semi-finals and finals. Other players in this list were:

Kinkade and Stasko of Toronto, Paul Batelaan, Elmer Gerst and Davidson of Parma Heights, and R. Flanders and Dean Meyers of Kent. Awards were also given nine outstanding players from teams which were eliminated in the first and second rounds and the quarter-finals. Players who were honored in this list were Paul Schellhaas of Hubbard, Bill Trobec of East Palestine, Joe Carlo of New Brighton, Charles Adams of Struthers, Earl Zelle of Hainan's Restaurant, Charles Hammach of East Canton, Eusdy Bucher of Minerva, Al Bradbury of Vienna and William Guaspone of the K. of C.

No Team Has as Yet Been Able To Hit Better Than 3,087

CHICAGO, April 4.—Team scores of 3200 were predicted before the 38th annual American Bowling Congress got under way, but today, as the contest entered its semi-final week at the Coliseum, most of the teams would settle for 100 pins less.

Fifteen nights of firing remain but over a month of sharpshoot-ing has failed to produce anything better than 3,087.

It would appear that the A. B. C. record of 3199 set in 1927 is safe for another year.

One of the week's big highlights will come Tuesday night when Harold Lloyd of the movies bowls with the Westwood Village team of Los Angeles. Lloyd will appear in singles and doubles on Wednesday.

Advance notices on many of the teams competing in the A. B. C. have made fine reading.

In contrast is the Colonial Paper Company five from Steubenville, Ohio. On the word of Capt. Lionel Moore the Colonials are a pick-up team whose members struggle along with averages of about 180. They reacted differently to the A. B. C. lanes and tumbled the pins at a 3,040 rate. They still are in second place.

Canton Pure Milk of Canton, O., was third highest in Sunday's rolling at 2887.

Highest single game of last night was turned in by the Arcadia Grills of Canton, O. Their total on the third attempt was 1051, with Otto Weimer the high man at 235.

Henry Picard Leads Pack, But Gallery Eyes Jones

Tightly-Jammed Field, Including Golf's Greatest, Heads Into Final Round of Augusta Event

By PAUL MICKELSON
AUGUSTA, Ga., April 4.—A tightly jammed star field, led by the straight shooting Henry Picard of Hershey, Pa., headed down the final 18-hole stretch of the fifth annual Augusta national invitational golf championship today but the big news was that grand slammer from Jaw-Juh, Mr. Robert Tyre Jones, Jr.

To the elation of everyone, Bobby made a comeback reminiscent of his world-conquering days yesterday when he breezed over the final nine holes with a record-tying 33 to post a third round total of par 72 and a 54-hole tally of 222, just seven shots behind Picard.

Most of the gallery of 5,000 spectators watched him and gave him a great ovation.

Wee Bobby Cruickshank, trimmed by the old master in the National open play-off at Inwood 15 years ago, predicted Jones was good enough to come back.

"Give him five tournaments," said Cruickshank, "and I think he still could beat the world at golf."

"It was more encouraging than any round I've played here," said Jones happily. "I felt more like my old self because I hit the ball firmly and had a fair idea where it was going."

Jones has improved steadily from the first round, scoring 76-74-72 successively. No one expects him to win but he stands a fine chance of bettering his best showing for the tournament, which was a tie for 12th place.

Casualties were numerous yesterday as the 40-man field struggled against a shifting wind. As Picard scored a pair of even par 72's alongside his first round 71 to post the leading total of 215, foremost of the labelled also-rans, Gene began with a 78 Saturday but got a 70 and a great 68 to tie for second, a shot behind Picard, with Ed Dudley, Harry Cooper and Ralph Guldahl, National open champion.
